Nimbus Sans is a sans-serif font designed by Type Foundry URW, based in Hamburg, Germany. The foundry was founded in 1972 and has been owned by a company called Monotype Imaging since 2020. Nimbus Sans was designed in 1987 and was based on Helvetica, but its purpose was to clean up any "flaws" that were present in the original Helvetica. The font family includes a total of seventeen fonts in five weights and two widths. The differences between Nimbus Sans and Helvetica can be seen most apparent in Nimbus Sans' more unique distribution of weights in heavy weights, and in the Bold Extended variations. The more bold variations look round whereas Helvetica is more square.
